Dr ÅSE OTTOSSON

Åse has conducted ethnographic research and worked with people and organisations in Alice Springs and across Central Australia for the past 23 years. Originally from Sweden, she previously worked as an international journalist, reporting from many parts of the world.

MARG FRIEDEL

Marg arrived in Alice in 1974 to join CSIRO as an arid lands ecologist and she still works as an ecologist after almost 50 years. Over that time she married Dick Kimber, had a family and enjoyed years of desert journeys with Dick as well as travelled widely overseas for work and pleasure.

MARCUS WILLIAMS

Most of Marcus' adult life has been in northern Australia with the majority in the Centre. He arrived in Alice Springs in 1986, a young cameleer seeking adventure.

JULIA BURKE

The big blue sky, red dirt and wide-open quiet space lured Julia from a lucrative Sydney publishing career to Alice Springs in 1994. Unrolling her swag of experiences thirty years later tumbles out camels, kids, Anangu women, memoirs, multimedia and a minky blanket smeared with small business and advocacy.
